

Ancient Christian Interpretations of “Violent Texts” in the Apocalypse

Edited by Joseph Verheyden,
Tobias Nicklas and Andreas Merkt

Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht

Novum Testamentum et Orbis Antiquus /
Studien zur Umwelt des Neuen Testaments.,
Band 092

1. Auflage 2011

313 Seiten, gebunden

€ 85,00 D / € 88,00 A

PDF eBook 69,99 €

ISBN 978-3-525-53976-7

ISBN (PDF eBook) 9783647539768

Joseph Verheyden, Tobias Nicklas,
Andreas Merkt (Hg.)

Ancient Christian Interpretations of “Violent Texts” in the Apocalypse

The present volume deals with early Christian and Patristic authors commenting on the various images and motifs of violence in the Book of Revelation and examines their reception at a large scale.

The Apocalypse of John belongs to the most puzzling texts of the New Testament. This book offers the proceedings of a conference that focused on how early Christian and Patristic authors have coped with all these many passages that deal with various sorts of violence. The volume contains essays on most of the important commentators and their reception history. It also deals with issues of method in reading the Book of Revelation, with important themes, the Jewish background of some of these motifs, and the reception of Patristic thought.

Dr. theol. Joseph Verheyden ist Professor für Neues Testament an der Theologischen Fakultät der Universität Leuven.

Dr. theol. Tobias Nicklas ist Professor für Exegese und Hermeneutik des Neuen Testaments an der Katholisch-Theologischen Fakultät der Universität Regensburg.

Buch und eBook sind über www.v-r.de sowie über www.vr-unipress.de bestellbar.

Dr. theol. Andreas Merkt ist Professor für Historische Theologie an der Katholisch-Theologischen Fakultät der Universität Regensburg und Mitherausgeber der Reihe Novum Testamentum Patristicum.