

Contents

Introduction: Living Roman Religion	9
Jörg Rüpke and Greg Woolf
1 Approaching Roman Religion	9
2 The Idea of Religion	11
3 Lived Ancient Religion	13
4 The Story of Rome	17
5 Themes and Methods	21
Bibliography	22
Empire as a field of religious action	25
Greg Woolf and Miguel John Versluys
1 A Religion of the Empire?	25
2 Emperors in the Religious life of the Roman World	27
3 Empire as an interaction sphere	30
4 The Empire in the World	33
5 Empire and Religions	36
Bibliography	38
The City as a Field of Religious Action: Manufacturing the Divine in Pompeii	43
William Van Andringa
1 A city full of gods	43
2 The Gods in Action	53
3 Working with the Gods	55
4 Conclusion	59
Bibliography	60
Sanctuaries – places of communication, knowledge and memory in Roman religion	61
Rubina Raja and Anna-Katharina Rieger
1 Sanctuaries – places for people and gods	61
2 The role of sanctuaries in an empire full of differences	67
3 Costs, events and experiences: Visitors, users and religious specialists in a sanctuary	84
4 Collection of knowledge and objects – sanctuaries in the dynamic between memory and oblivion	93

Bibliography	95
People and Competencies	107
Georgia Petridou and Jörg Rüpke
1 Introduction	107
2 Public priests	108
3 Divination, diviners and the diagnostic value of signs	113
4 Oracular officials in the Eastern Roman Provinces	119
5 Anchoring religious innovation	121
6 Small-group religious entrepreneurs	122
7 Developing a priestly role in Christ-centred imaginations	127
8 The philosophers as religious experts and henotheistic tendencies before Christianity	129
9 Setting borders to religious experts	133
Bibliography	134
The Gods and Other Divine Beings	141
Heidi Wendt
1 Introduction	141
2 The Gods and Roman ›Religion‹	142
3 Whose Roman Religion?	144
4 Interacting with Divine Beings in the Roman World	151
5 Intellectualizing Religious Experts	159
Bibliography	162
Managing problems: Choices and solutions	166
Richard Gordon
1 Introduction	166
2 Mainstream options	168
3 Minor ritual specialists	188
4 Self-help	194
5 Conclusion	198
Bibliography	199
Artefacts and their humans: Materialising the history of religion in the Roman world	210
Miguel John Versluys and Greg Woolf
1 Introduction: From (Late) Prehistoric to Roman	210
2 Artefacts and religious change in the Roman world	213
3 Objects, affordances, and religion	214
4 Objectscape and semiotic form	215
5 How new objects and materials change religious practices: automata	217
6 Religion in the Empire of things	219
7 Beyond wood	220
8 With terracotta (and double moulds)	222

9	Through marble and caementicium	225
10	Led by lead	227
11	Conclusion	228
	Bibliography	230

The Impact of Textual Production on the Organisation and Proliferation of Religious Knowledge in the Roman Empire 234

Georgia Petridou and Jörg Rüpke

1	Introduction	234
2	Calendars: Appropriating Time and Systematizing Religious Action . .	236
3	Controlling ›Religion‹: Legalization and Ratification of Religious Knowledge	239
4	Re-framing ›Religion‹: Exegesis, Appropriation and Translation as Means of Reiterating Old and Propagating New Religious Ideas	244
5	Texts and Rituals in the Second Century CE: A Century of Intense Religious Experimentation	246
6	›Religion‹ as Philosophy in the Second Sophistic	250
7	Martyrologies: Textualizing Death and Embodying devotio	254
	Bibliography	256

Economy and Religion 262

Richard Gordon, Rubina Raja and Anna-Katharina Rieger

1	Introduction	262
2	Income, outgoings and the nature of the evidence	267
3	Public versus private: an unhelpful opposition?	268
4	Funding civic and imperial religion	271
5	The finances of associations and small religious groups	283
6	Pilgrimage as an economic factor	286
7	Conclusion	292
	Bibliography	292

Abbreviations 306

Figures 308

Index 311

Places	311
Names	313
Keywords	315